EDITORS' NOTES

The following are the proceedings of a Conference held under the auspices of the Canada-United States Law Institute and the Case Western Reserve University, School of Law. The Conference was held in Cleveland, Ohio on April 21-23, 1995. The theme of the Conference was Promoting and Protecting Innovation in a Changing World: Canada/U.S. Concerns and Opportunities.

The articles and discussion printed here have been compiled from transcripts of the Conference and papers submitted by the speakers. Minimal editing has been done in order to preserve the spirit of the Conference, while ensuring clarity of expression. Questions regarding unfooted assertions and cited materials should be addressed to the authors.

Footnotes have been placed in the format which complies with A Uniform System of Citation (15th ed.). The Journal recognizes that some discrepancies exist between the preferred citation system in the United States and that in Canada.

The views expressed within are those of the authors or Conference participants, and do not necessarily reflect the opinions or policies of any organization, governmental agency, corporation, etc. with which they may be affiliated.

The Editors are grateful to those people who have assisted in the production and printing of this volume, particularly Carolyn Speaker and Debbie Korenchan of the Case Western Reserve University School of Law staff. The Editors would also like to thank Ms. Afsaneh Azar for her guidance and encouragement, and Professor Henry King, Jr. for his dedication to the Journal.
